Kaleidoscope

We, the people that compose the class of 1991, are diverse. Our class has representatives from nearly every country and race and this diversity stimulates us to become high achievers.

To honor this diversity, our yearbook is named "KALEIDOSCOPE." A kaleidoscope through a scattering of colored glass transforms the energy of light into many beautiful, symmetrical patterns. In the same way, the energy of the staff and students at C.R.L.S. transformed the dissonance of contrasting programs, interests, cultures, and race into an ever changing but consistently harmonious configuration.

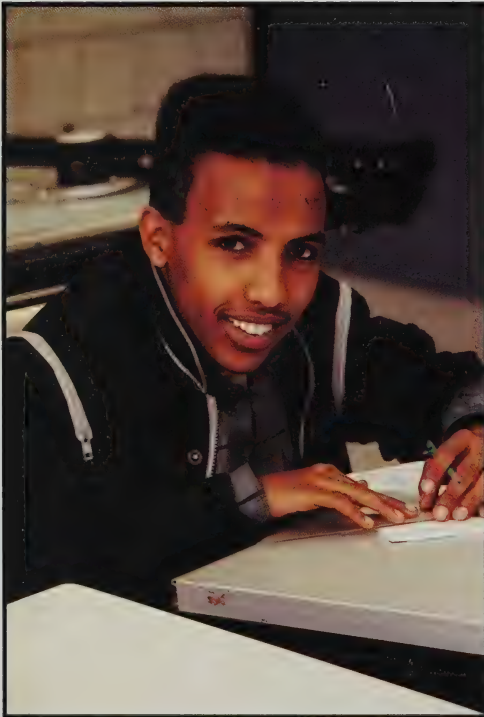

The vibrancy and energy of the C.R.L.S. community is not only seen in its exceptional academic performance but is also visible in every corner of the school. Whether it is people socializing between classes in the halls or carefully planning the senior trip in the student service center the people of C.R.L.S. always manage to achieve their goals, while at the same time enjoying themselves. Through a healthy interest in learning, a flair for resourcefulness, and a knack for having fun, the student and staff at C.R.L.S. have successfully reached a happy medium between work and play.

We now present to you the class of 1991, the living kaleidoscope.

Junior Year Semi-Formal

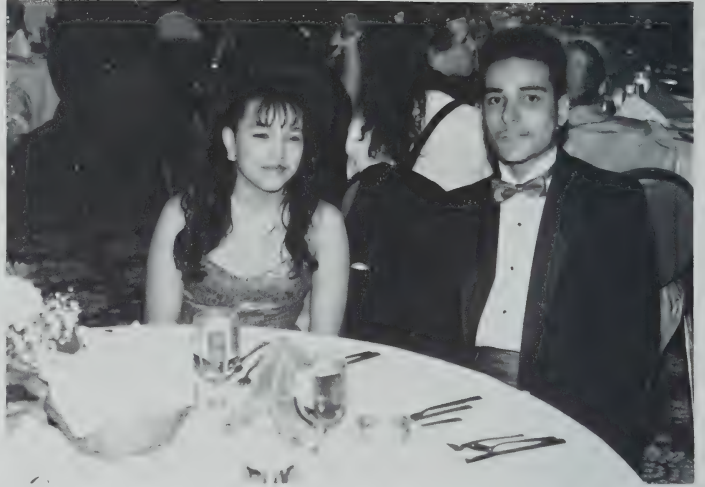

The 1990 Semi-Formal at the Sheraton Commander was a highlight of the year. The dancing was lively and the cuisine was tasty.

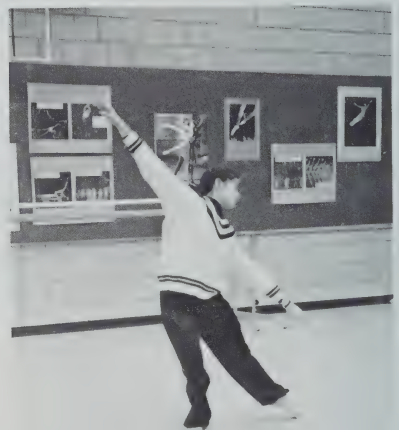

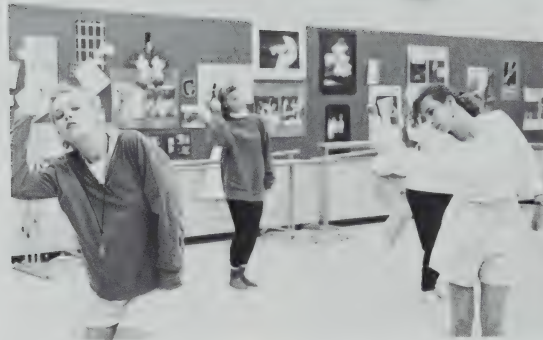

It was wonderful seeing so many of our classmates in a formal setting and looking so attractive. It was well attended and everybody was sad when the night ended.

Drama

Our production for the Massachusetts High School Drama Festival was "Laff in the Dark," an original allegory written by the company. The show dealt with the many forms romantic love can take from the first kiss to utter rejection. A blend of humor, surrealism, and tragedy, "Laff in the Dark" made its way to the state finals, where it earned first place and numerous awards, sending C.R.L.S. to New England for the fourth year in a row!

"Dear World" was our summer musical, a story about three Parisian mad women who aim to stop the evil in the world by tricking a corrupt threesome who plan to tear down their favorite café to construct oil wells. Meanwhile, a love story develops between a café waitress and the money-hungry president's errand boy, who proves in the end where his values (and his heart) really are.

Our fall production was "Museum" by Tina Howe. It was about a room in a museum and its odd observers, and questioned the meaning of art.

The show was acclaimed by the newspapers and had large audiences for each night. Each character of the large cast was interesting and added his or her own unique reaction to the artwork, all of which was created by the talented crew.

Music Department

The music department, located in the basement of the Arts building, is a place where even the most shy student in C.R.L.S. can open up, and be himself or herself. As one descends down the stairs filled with fresh air leading to the artsy basement, one can sense the presence of enthusiasm carried out through a whole new world, where expressions of all sorts coincide with discipline, hard work, and free spirit.

A001, the head quarters of the instrumental students, is where the chamber music of Bach leads its way to symphonies of Beethoven and Handel joined by the unforgettable melodies of Duke Ellington and Irving Berlin, the harmonies of Chick Corea and Gitano, and the live beats of Vanilla Ice and M.C. Hammer. Mr. Bob Ponte, who likes to play basketball with the band and orchestra members, is the instrumental teacher in charge. Mr. Jimmy Smith, the popular and funny energizer of the band, is the percussion teacher. Mr. Ponte and Mr. Smith are two of the VIPs behind the numerous performances of C.R.L.S. Mr. Anthony Appicella, and Ms. Jean TePaski are the force behind the music department.

Adjacent to the instrumental haven is A002, the choral paradise. A place where the chorus, the gospel choir, and the vocal ensemble lend a hand in making the basement truly diverse and harmonious. Softly spoken Ms. Callan is the teacher of our successful vocal students.

Everyone likes to play "Heart and Soul", but the piano lab is one place where one is expected to perform more than that. Beethoven's "For Elise", Chopin's "Chanson De L'adieu", and Ivanovici's "Waves of the Danube" are among the favorites of C.R.L.S.'s piano students. Ms. Cummings, always full of life, is the maestro.

Throughout the year, members of the band, orchestra, gospel choir, chorus, and the jazz ensemble have been involved in many concerts and performances such as the winter and spring concerts, chamber music concert, M.L. King Jr. assembly, and the dance concert. The music department puts its emphasis on educating and allowing as many students as possible to get acquainted and to perform major works.

Wynton Marselis Comes to C.R.L.S.!

Mr. Wynton Marselis, the greatest classical and jazz trumpeter since Louis Armstrong, visited C.R.L.S. on Thursday, November 8th, 1990. Mr. Ken Reeves, the vice mayor of Cambridge who is also a close friend of Mr. Marselis, arranged this visit while Mr. Marselis was in town for a concert at the Berklee Performance Center. Two days prior to his arrival, the music department was full of excitement, especially the members of the jazz ensemble. C.R.L.S. met with Mr. Marselis in A001, the band room where only a selected group was invited to attend and meet Mr. Marselis in an intimate setting. Heather Johnson, the Anita Burke of C.R.L.S., sang "Misty" (words by Johnny Burke and music by Erroll Garner) for Mr. Marselis. Mr. Marselis was so impressed with Heather that he spent two hours working with her and the rhythm section. He stayed for three and a half hours, playing and teaching jazz, sharing thoughts on his life and ours, music, practice, musicians, and school. Mr. Marselis encouraged the music students to "give their best to whatever they do." At the end of his visit, Mr. Marselis invited the jazz ensemble to his concert that night and posed with them for a photograph.

First Day

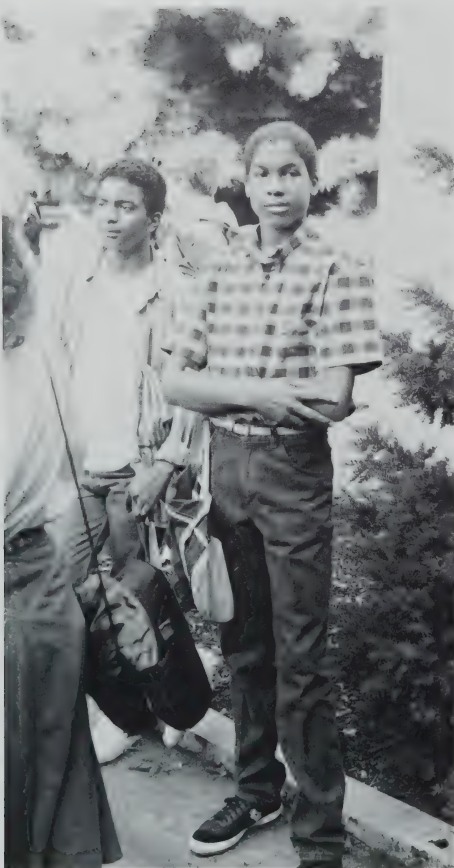

The first day of high school was full of new things. We were in a new building, surrounded by new faces, new voices, maybe a new language. It was a day full of anticipation, anxiety, and hopes for the future. All around us were nervous smiles and fidgeting hands. Then we got separated from our friends. We had to go into the auditorium with our house and sit with our homeroom. We sat in the dim auditorium and listened to the welcoming speeches. Finally we were led to our homerooms. Once there we were presented with rules, advice, and warnings. Whether we followed the rules, took the advice, or paid heed to the warnings we have made it to our senior year. We have all faced problems, in school and out of school, and managed to survive. Now it is time to celebrate. Soon we will be facing something else that's new, a new job, a new school, the army, or some other personal challenge. No matter where you're going remember this first day and the years that followed. If you can make it this far you can go as far as you want. Good Luck and may all your hopes be fulfilled.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE
1991 GRADUATING CLASS

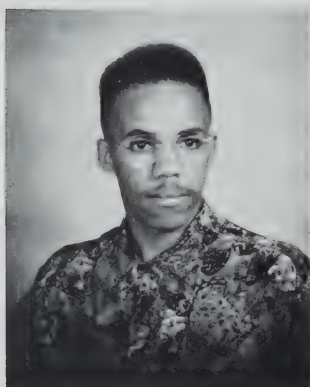

As you enter the threshold of the 1990's, an era that promises to be one filled with exciting innovations and advancements in technology and learning, my hope for you is that your four years of academic preparation at Cambridge Rindge and Latin School have given you the credentials needed to succeed in the career of your choice. I wish you a future filled with happiness and a desire for life long learning.

Asian Club

The Asian Club contains a diversity of students not just from Asia. The students from different nationalities collect and share the knowledge of their countries. The members' suggestions for activities are always welcome, especially if they are culturally related. We do a variety of activities from parties to attending cultural performances. The Asian Club is a place for interested individuals whose intentions are to learn about cultures and have fun while doing it.

Crew Club

Watching the long, slender boats glide by ... a beautiful and graceful sight. Rowing involves teamwork and a lot of fun, but it isn't all grace and beauty.

It might seem like a simple sport, all there is to do is put the oar in the water and pull. You would never believe how much goes into and comes out of just pulling through that one stroke. Driving the oar through the water takes strength, skill, and long hours of team practice. When you finally take the oar smoothly out of the water you get the satisfaction of knowing that you made it through the stroke. Your team might do well in the race, but most of all you pulled as hard as you possibly could and that's good enough to put a winning smile on anyone's face.

And of course, when the race is over, and the boats are finally returned to their racks in the boathouse for the winter, you've got the memories of demanding practices and good times with your crew mates. As the river freezes, you've got the winter to train and dream of the thaw and springtime rowing on the Charles.

The goal of the History Club is to stimulate a love of history and to demonstrate the relationship between the study of history and the ability to analyze current events.

The old adage that those who do not learn the lessons of history are doomed to repeat them, is the maxim we use in our club presentations.

We attempt to promote an awareness to current events and their historical roots by using many vehicles.

We have struggled to present a balanced view of today's world and how history has shaped that world.

This year our president and a cadre of long term members leave us. We wish them well, and look forward to preserving their legacy.

Sincerely, officers of the History Club

The War in the Gulf

On August 2, 1990, Iraq invaded and took over the country of Kuwait. The result of this action was the War in the Persian Gulf. We felt this event was an important part of our senior year so we decided to include it in our yearbook. The following pages are a review of the war and the events which led to it. We state no opinion about whether the war was right or wrong. We leave that decision to you.

Iraq's dictatorial ruler, Saddam Hussein, had several reasons for invading Kuwait. First there was oil prices. Kuwait was selling its oil at low prices that other Arab countries didn't want to have to compete with. Then there was Iraq's long standing claim that Kuwait was part of Iraqi territory. And lastly there was political power. Hussein hoped that by getting Kuwait and raising the price of oil he would become a leader of the Arab world. President George Bush immediately responded to Kuwait's call for help by asking Saudi Arabia to allow U.S. troops on their soil. They did, on the grounds that the U.S. would help them defend themselves against a possible attack by Iraq.

At the time of the invasion there were 2500 American citizens in Kuwait and 600 in Iraq. When Hussein saw that President Bush was not going to let Kuwait be captured that easily he took advantage of the citizens trapped in these countries. It was apparent that he was planning on using them as human shields at important military locations. This news began the public demand for retaliation from U.S. citizens. It was the start of the long five months they were held hostage.

The United Nations soon declared an embargo on Iraq. No countries were allowed to trade with Iraq until the embargo was lifted. Many countries were willing to wait out the embargo but the U.S. wasn't. President Bush ordered a naval blockade to enforce the embargo without waiting for permission from the U.N. Within a month after the invasion the U.S. had over 100,000 combat troops in Saudi Arabia. General H. Norman Schwarzkopf was named Desert Storm Commander and put in charge of all the Allied forces in the Gulf.

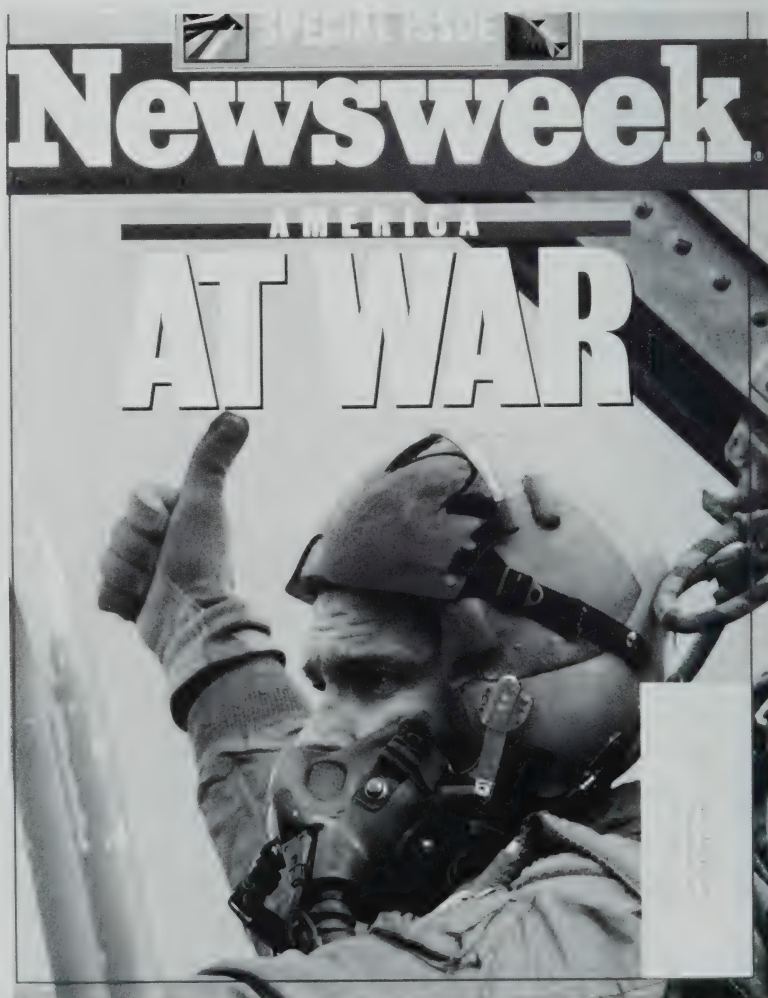

War became a definite possibility. Every night on the news we heard about more troops arriving in Saudi Arabia. In the early fall the reserves started to be called up. People began to put up yellow ribbons in support of the hostages. Polls showed the majority agreed with the Bush's actions. Many people supported the soldiers and the use of military force. They wanted to get Hussein. At the same time people began to organize committees against the war. There were demonstrations and posters. People sported stickers protesting the idea of killing over oil. The price of gas rose 50% by late fall.

Secretary of State Jim Baker flew all over the world trying to recruit countries to join the U.S. in the Persian Gulf and Saudi Arabia. A coalition began to form. Planes from Britain, France, Italy, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait joined the large U.S. force already in Saudi Arabia. Egypt, Morocco and Syria joined Saudi Arabia and Kuwait to form a fragile but crucial, Arab coalition within the larger Allied Coalition. Although the Arab Coalition was not a formal coalition it was important because it showed that this war was not a conflict between Arabs and Westerners but Iraq against most of the world.

There was plenty to talk about. The televisions told us about the threat of chemical warfare. We learned about the size of Iraq's army, the fourth largest in the world. We watched as Hussein made peace with Iraq's rival, Iran. We stared as Hussein returned the Iran's land and prisoners that had cost Iraq so many lives to get. We heard about Arab countries torn over who to support. We commented when the Palestinian Liberation Organization became Hussein's strongest ally. We saw Jordan's King Hussein try not to break the trade embargo despite its heavy economic reliance on Iraq. We watched King Hussein try to remain friends with everyone and anger no one.

People talked about the number of women in the military. We could no longer want the "boys to come back home." Now we wanted the men and women to return. People spoke about the high percentage of blacks in the military. There were comparisons to the Vietnam war. Will it happen all over again? People compared Hussein to Hitler. Even while we called him a horrible threat to the world he told the people of Iraq that the U.S. represented the devil and must be stopped. There was plenty to talk about.

The weeks crept on and still there was no sign of either peace or war. U.N. delegates were constantly coming up with peace proposals only to have them rejected by Iraq or by the rest of the world. The U.S. continued to request aid from countries to help finance the military buildup. The hostages remained hostages and more people said good-bye to family and friends as they left to join the troops in the Persian Gulf.

In mid-fall the U.N. came out with twelve resolutions that they said Hussein would have to accept. The U.N. set a deadline. If Iraq had not withdrawn from Kuwait by midnight on January 15, 1991 (EST), the Coalition could attack. Bush officially declared that we would. In mid December the hostages were released. There was much rejoicing and relief. However, people didn't forget the day that drew closer. The country watched the days go by and waited.

As that important Tuesday drew closer demonstrations broke out with a new energy. Students in our school organized a school walkout. The school administration said that anyone who walked out would be suspended for three days. The organizers would be suspended for ten. The whole week was dominated by the waiting. What would happen? Would we attack first? Would Hussein attack us first? Would Hussein give in? The streets were filled with many small demonstrations. People talked about going down to Washington for the big demonstration.

January fifteenth came and went and nothing happened. We watched, waiting. Another long day crept by and still no news. Everything was silent. And then, at six-thirty P.M. on January sixteenth, (EST), the U.S. and the coalition forces ended Operation Shield and began Operation Desert Storm. The Coalition forces add up to 680,000, while Iraq has only 545,000 both in and near Kuwait.

The first day was extraordinarily successful. We flew over 2000 air attacks, also known as sorties, with a reported eighty-percent success rate. Euphoria hit America. Many were sure the war would be over in a few days. The stock market soared. Morale was high. Iraq's only response to the attack was anti-aircraft guns and a few poorly aimed missiles.

For the next weeks the U.S. sent between 2000 and 3000 sorties every day. The U.S. employed their best weapons including the F-117, better known as the Stealth Fighter. Other weapons were Apache helicopters, Tomahawk missiles with incredibly accurate guidance systems, F-15's, the fastest planes in the world, and B-52 bombers left over from 1962 and WW II with the latest technology added on. The weapons we faced were Russian MiG's, mobile missile launchers and the largest collection of mines in the world.

We watched the newscasters put on their gas masks with the air raid sirens in the background. We watched the U.S. planes bomb military targets in Baghdad with live coverage by the CNN news crew. We saw Patriot missiles intercept and blow up a Scud missile. We were watching live coverage of a war half-way across the world.

On January 18 Iraq launched eight Scud missiles at Tel Aviv, Israel. Israel threatened to retaliate. The U.S. feared they would and offered to retaliate for Israel. The Arab coalition was fragile but important and to have Israel fight next to the U.S. could very possibly destroy what people had worked so hard to form. Iraq kept firing the missiles at Israel with the hopes that Israel would retaliate and cause the coalition to split and maybe even have some of the forces join Iraq in the fight against Israel. The U.S. sent some of its patriot missiles to help Israel defend itself against the frequent Scud missile attacks.

CNN had 24 hour coverage with frequent updates from the Pentagon and from the military in Saudi Arabia. General Schwarzkopf and General Colin Powell, the Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman, became familiar names. We heard with horror how Hussein violated the Geneva Convention which Iraq had signed. The whole country saw the picture of a POW on the cover of Newsweek.

The weeks crept by with little change in strategy. The Allied planes were careful to hit only military targets telling us that they were fighting the Iraqi government, not the Iraqi people. We saw how they were careful to risk as few Allied lives as possible. We saw tapes from the planes of their targets blowing up. Never has there been such immediate and direct coverage of a war.

Hussein intentionally poured millions of gallons of oil into the Persian Gulf. It was the largest spill in history and was over 35 miles long and 10 miles wide. We marveled at how a person could do such a thing.

We waited for the ground war as we watched the forces gather at the borders. We heard about Iraq's weak responses with surprise. Where was its great army? In response to Allied bombings Iraq sent their planes to Iran to be sheltered there.

On Baghdad television Hussein verbally attacked the Allied forces saying that they were deliberately terrorizing the Iraqi people. He continued saying that the Iraqi forces were successful. We heard with amazement the large difference between the number of Allied troops he said they captured and the much smaller number that we reported captured.

The ground war began on February 23, at eight P.M. (EST). The Airforce didn't let up on the sorties. The ground forces moved forward into both Iraq and Kuwait. The Iraqis started to surrender to the Allied troops at an amazing rate. We heard about their poor treatment, their lack of food, and how demoralized they appeared to be.

Hussein began to accept the U.N. resolutions and pull out of Kuwait.

Yellow ribbons were everywhere. People hoped that the end of the war was near. The ground troops were reported to have entered Kuwait City after only two days. After one day the Allied troops were over thirty miles into Iraq with little resistance from the Iraqi troops. The number of U.S. casualties remained astonishingly low.

On February 27, Bush declared a cease fire that went into action at midnight. The ground war had lasted exactly 100 hours. The Iraqi troops left Kuwait in ruins behind them and took many hostages with them. There were over 600 oil wells on fire causing unspeakable amounts of environmental damage. Kuwaitis told tales of torture and horror. They spoke of terrifying randomness of the brutal killings and arrests.

The U.S. forces finished the fighting suffering only 150 deaths. The new Prime Minister of Britain, John Major, showed himself to be a capable successor to Margaret Thatcher. General Schwarzkopf became a national celebrity. All the U.S. military technology that cost so much proved effective. Polls showed that 89% of U.S.

Citizens approved of Bush. Even most democrats supported Bush.

Rebellions broke out in Iraq. Many of Hussein's supporters were now against him. They were angry that he had deceived them into fighting a hopeless war. In Kuwait the people asked for a democracy. They were angered at the way the royal family left the country and went on vacation during the occupation. Kuwaiti women demanded more rights. Syria, Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Oman, Qatar, Bahrain, and the United Arab Emirates agreed to form a peace-keeping force. Jordan's people continued to support Hussein. Iran stated that it plans to keep the more than 200 Iraqi planes seeking safety in Iran.

No one can argue against the fact that the allied forces achieved huge success in their campaign. However, the war brings about many important questions. Should we have been there in the first place? Was it a just war? Is America justified in its role as the world's policeman? These questions will be asked for years to come.

Girls' Track

Girls' indoor and outdoor track seasons met with great turnout and success. Indoor, the 4x400 relay won Easterns and placed 5th in nationals. Outdoor, the team placed well in the suburban league and class A state meets. Both seasons, many girls reached the all-state meets. The track team had a fun, successful, year under coaches Denise Banks and Joe Sousa.

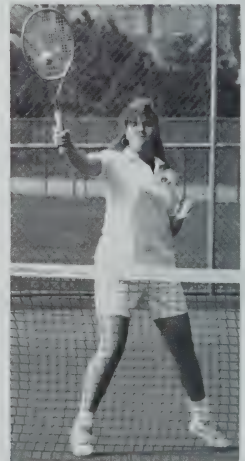

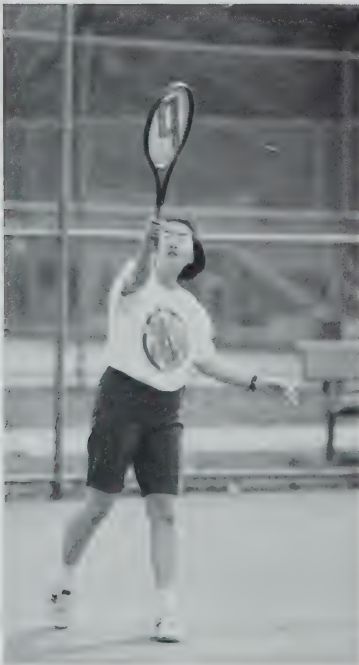

BOYS' TRACK

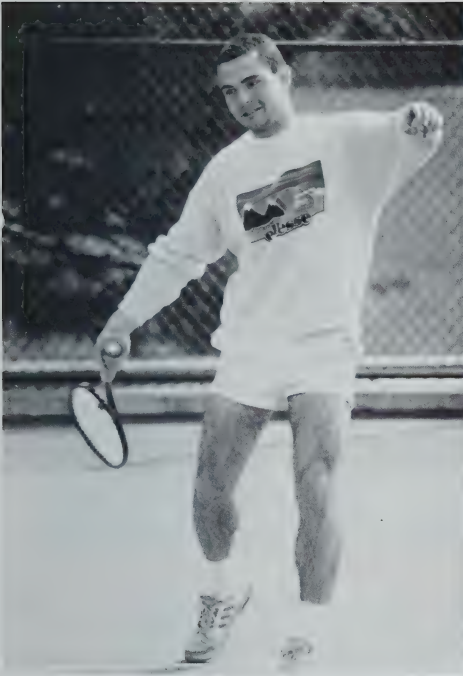

Girls' Tennis

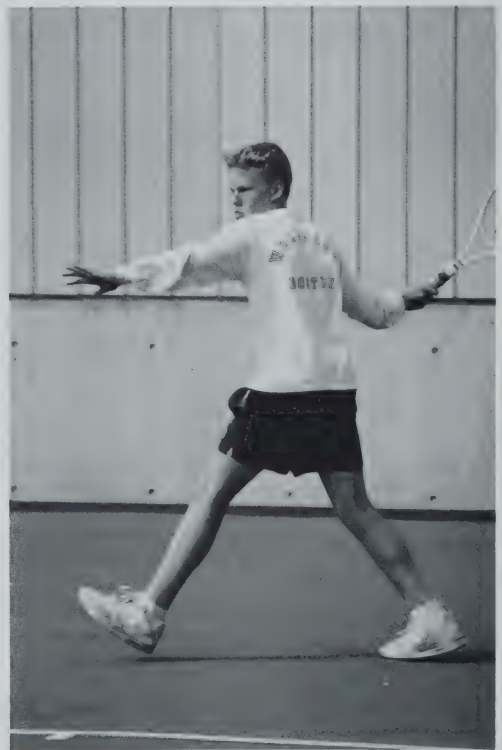

The girls' tennis team finished an exciting season this year. The daily practice games were exciting and hard. Led by senior, Lucresha Duncan, the varsity team raced through the season with super results. The J.V. team also had a strong season. Both teams played with effort and enthusiasm. Over all, they had a wonderful and fun year. Good luck to seniors Luchresha Duncan and Woong Soon Lee.

Boys' Tennis

The boys' tennis team finished the season with a 5-4 record.

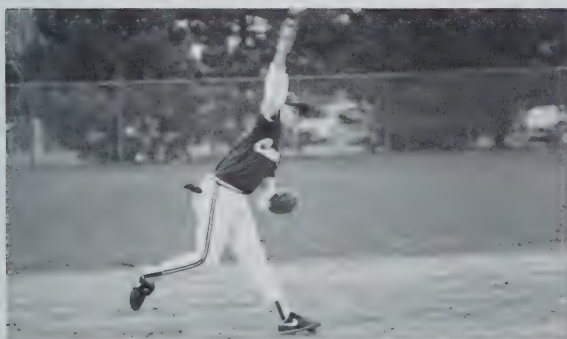

SOFTBALL

BASEBALL

Last year the baseball team was disappointed with a 7-11 record. However, we saw a lot of players develop and this year looks promising. Since we only lost 4 or 5 seniors, if we bring up a new kid from J.V., we can still have pretty much the same line up.

GIRLS' SOCCER

The girls' soccer team, under the leadership of Filomena Silva, and captains Sarah Cloman and Danya Ferraro, finished the season with a 4-13-1 record; improved from last year. They have a strong group of underclass players and look forward to even better seasons in the near future.

GIRLS' CROSS-COUNTRY

The girls' cross-country team had a terrific year. The team surprised everyone. With three freshmen, two sophomores and only two seniors the outlook wasn't that good. To add to this six out of the seven girls had never even run cross-country before. The season was very exciting with the times improving with every race. They had a new coach, Joe Coady, who did a wonderful job. The team finished third in the league with sophomore, Nelly Brown, a league All-Star.

Looking back at the 1990 football season, one could think of it as a disappointment and a failure. One could believe that the Falcons had lack of talent, but the Falcons have the most talent in the State. Some failing to realize that the football team faces one of the toughest schedules in the State; and by confronting such powerhouses and superbowl contenders. The team was built up of mostly young, less experienced players, who took the place of players of past.

If one were to look at the statistics, one is deceived. The numbers and points do not measure the effort, heart or determination of the team. Even though consciously aware of their upsetting record, the team continually came to practice and showed their determination and desire to win. They pulled together, working as one and showing the powerhouse teams that the Falcons are nothing to take lightly.

As the 1990 season closed, the coaches, players and fans have a positive attitude that in the years to come, that the dream of becoming a superbowl contender is getting closer every year and some day will come true.

Best Wishes to the Class of 1991 Edward Sarasin Principal

"Nothing in the World can take the place of persistence. Talent will not; nothing is more common than unsuccessful men with talent. Genius will not; unrewarded genius is almost a proverb. Education will not; the world is full of educated derelicts. Persistence and determination alone are omnipotent. The slogan "Press on," has solved and always will solve the problems of the human race."

Senior Writing

I am sitting on the dock, legs immersed in the grey-green water, eyes fixed on the bay. If I squint off to the left a little, I can make out the sail of the Blue Heron, gliding through the waves, out where the waves go from olive to indigo. It is too far to make out the crew, but I know who they are, and I can seem them in my mind's eye, breathing deeply, wind sweeping their hair in all directions. I am grasping the pole which anchors the dock, and as I take my hand away I see that my palm is covered with reddish dust. I rinse it in the bay, and I have to resist the temptation to dive off the swaying dock, fully clothed. Why not? My checkered sundress is already damp and salty. Minnows swim cheerfully through my fingers.

Since I am alone, and since my only audience is an appreciative collection of moored boats, I begin to sing wordlessly, starting low. My voice floats across the sea, and I hear the wind take my arias over to Seagull-Cracker Point. The boats clank and screech as they shift in their moorings; a duet.

I imagine a girl my age sitting on a dock a few miles away, brushing sand off her calves from sunbathing and poking herself to check for sunburn. She is humming some blues and waiting for a nice gust of sea air to cool her body. On the breeze comes my melody, harmony to her hums. She stops, wipes sweat from her upper lip, and imagines me.

I think of how I am alone, the sun warming the fabric of my dress and the back of my head, stinging my cheekbones. And how I am not alone, because a walk down the beach and a climb of steep curving path would bring me to a world where 'I' becomes 'we.' I could be engulfed into a conversation with a ten-year-old or a seventy-year-old. If I read, someone will come sit near me with a book of their own.

And if I want to be alone, no one will bother me, or think it strange or anti-social behavior. Sooner or later, someone will come join me, and sit beside me on the dock. The dock will tilt unevenly, groaning and threatening to sink, until the weight has been adequately placed. We will talk of unrequited love, and how we wish, instead of the inevitable return to school, we could sit here forever, making original waves in the bay with our feet.

Jessica J. Sumal

Ivy

She's a pretty girl in a vicious world, a traveler in disguise, who walks the tracks with graceful steps, (the light of danger in her eyes) and sings a song of fans unfurled, satin skirts and lace trimmed lies.

The solid ground below her shimmers. (as lightening in the sky, that shines the clouds of long-lost lands and sounds an age old cry) when, with a golden, sun-glazed glimmer, she gives a last and lonely sigh.

Mary Hannal

We Are The Children of the Night

We are the children of the night
Who lie on Rock-n-Roll
We see our Freedom in our sight
At the end of a Bottomless hole

We don't care how people talk
We don't care what people think.
To us love is the eternal rock Which makes up the missing link.

Music helps us soothe the pain
It helps us dry the tears Our feelings we express in vain
It helps us face our fears.

People may think our music is strange
As long as we like it who cares
People may think we're mentally deranged
But who makes up the Dares.

It cuts all the way through my heart
Like the Blade of a razor-sharp knife
I knew it from the very start
That rock was to be my life.

Paul Tippett

I'm a bird. A bird that is always soaring up and up into the clouds. Only when the white fog surrounds me and the cold penetrates my feathers do I let myself fall.
I pause in that sea of white,
my wings ceasing to move,
the wind alone holding me up, then, tipping my head down and tucking my wings up for the least resistance, I fall. Down, down, down, I spiral down, my nose always aimed for the ground. Just when I am about to crash and even those who know me turn their heads, I lift my head and spread my wings.

The trees shelter me, the leaves protect me from the eyes watching me. I stay there and recover from the near death. Why do I do it?
I don't know. Each time I vow to myself and my lungs that I will never do it again, and yet, the next week
comes and I'm up in the air again.

I'm a bird who never builds its nest until there is no straw left lying on the ground, until the good branches are gone, until the mates are taken and the dances are over. Only then do I look for a mate and a branch, only then do I search for straw and twigs. I may work harder than the rest but I never work in vain. I always get what I want if I want it enough.
None of my eggs are ever dead. None get stolen, none fall out of my well made nest, and none have ugly fathers.

I never fly south until I wake up to find the water frozen and the seeds stuck in the wooden birdhouses. I wait until the leaves are gone from the trees and the grass has died. I wait until the pumpkins have been picked and the apples have all fallen and rotted. I wait until the grapes have been turned to wine and the turkeys have all been chosen and slaughtered. I wait until the meat hangs in the smokehouse and the sun sets early. Only then do

I leave my home.

I save this time for traveling. I go around the world. I have been to India five times, China ten. I have seen the Nile in Egypt and the riots in South Africa. I have seen the mountains in Chile and the sea beat against the coast of Argentina. I have watched the fighting in Guatemala and sat on the wall of the Panama canal. I have slept in the bow of a boat from Columbia filled with coke and sat on the mast of a boat catching fish. Every year I go somewhere new and see everything in between.

But come spring I always return to my home, to New England. That is the place I love, the only place people don't stare at me and follow me with their binoculars.
Nobody takes out cameras pointed at me. There are other birds like me. Only those birds don't have friends all over the world so they aren't really like me, are they?

Hsuan Tsen

My Best Friend

Before you came along I didn't know what was ahead.

 My mind was locked, dead
 You had the key to open this door
 No one else ever cared,
 before
 You taught me to laugh
 You even taught me to smile
 You opened my eyes
 You taught me to see
 Many, many things life
 holds for me.

Christina Miller

We knew It would rain
 It was rather expected
 We knew It was coming soon.

Where do we turn to?
 Where do we go?
 Should we run and hide?

Or hope for a strong wind
 To come and blow the clouds away giving room
 For the sun.

Lawanna Bullock

On the night that Terese, Ben, Erik, Hsuan and I had gone to take pictures, I had a very strange feeling. It was 11:00 at night and we were walking around with cameras getting ready to approach some homeless people to take their picture.
 We were in Harvard Square and it was very empty. We approached a group of homeless people in sleeping bags and they were very drunk. We asked them if we could take their picture. One very angry man responded and let only two people take their picture.

 He woke up his wife and they posed for Ben. I found the pose they made for Ben very interesting. I knew it would make a very powerful image. The man was sitting and he was holding his wife by his side. His wife's eyes were squinched. She barely was. I couldn't quite explain what I found so interesting about it. After these series of approaches I realized that this project was not just capturing a good image, it's learning how to approach people and communicating with the homeless people.
 It's trying to get the right approach and being very courteous. With my experience I feel that photographing homeless people brings on a large depth of expressionism.
 Their pose, the way they look. I find that it's completely different from photographing any other person on the street. Their immediate reaction would be, "Why me? Why does some stranger want a photograph of me?" With homeless people they just let me take their photograph without asking any questions. Maybe it's just that they're drunk or crazy.

Max Coniglio

As Kim and I set out to the streets of Harvard Square, it didn't take us long before we approached a group of four men sleeping on a subway heating vent, on Holyoke Street with their old, musty smelling bags.
 Watching their movement I found it ironic that their heads were almost touching the Harvard Community Health Plan building. While the warm steam kept them alive by its periodic outbursts, we took their pictures without even being aware of what we were doing.

With my clean well-groomed self taking pictures, it felt so awkward to be photographing those that had so little, when it looked like I had so much. It made it easier that they didn't know that we were taking their picture; yet it still didn't feel right.

The group nestled together their bodies touching,
 helping to get each other through the cold nights.
 Their bodies were on the vent while their legs lay uncomfortably on the cold brick sidewalk.

Watching the people walk by, stepping over and going around the men made me sad, as it seemed nobody noticed.

College Fair

The C.R.L.S. 1990 College Fair was successful as usual, 100's of kids turned out to get the inside scoop on the colleges of their interest. It was a great opportunity for those that felt overwhelmed by options, to help narrow down the possibilities, or get reassurance as to their #1 preference.

Senior Class Ski Trip

This year's annual senior class ski trip was to Waterville Valley. At five o'clock in the morning thirty seniors gathered at the bus, eager to face the challenges of the slopes. We got in a full day of skiing and made good use of the small amount of snow that covered the icy slopes. Despite our tumbles and falls we all left feeling triumphant. A special thanks to Mr. Greenidge for making the day possible. May next year's trip be as successful as this one was.

C.R.L.S. Yearbook Posse

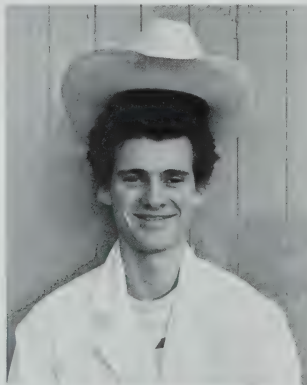

Official Saturday Lunch

To the class of 1991,
We present this yearbook to you as a result of a year of hard work, headaches and laughs. We would like to thank everyone on the yearbook staff for their great contributions toward this year's book. We would especially like to thank Kathy Mahoney for donating her time and energy and Al Ferreira for patiently guiding us through the year and putting up with us. Thanks to Rob Riordan, the entire senior class, and all those who aided us along the way. Good luck and enjoy the book!

My heartfelt thanks to all those students and staff that made this book possible. Not everyone that made a contribution is listed on these two pages, there were just too many to list.

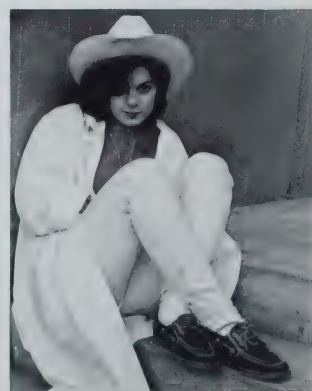

This year's work load was made lighter by a seasoned staff, Woong Soon Lee joined the staff her freshman year and continued through her senior year. Hsuan, Liam and Gabe completed their third year on the staff with Hsuan and Liam bearing the responsibility as co-editors.

This book will mean many things to many people and we hope that pride will be among them. We put a lot of energy into preventing errors and can only hope that we did not go too far off that track.

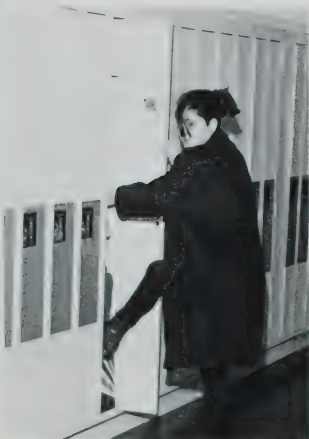

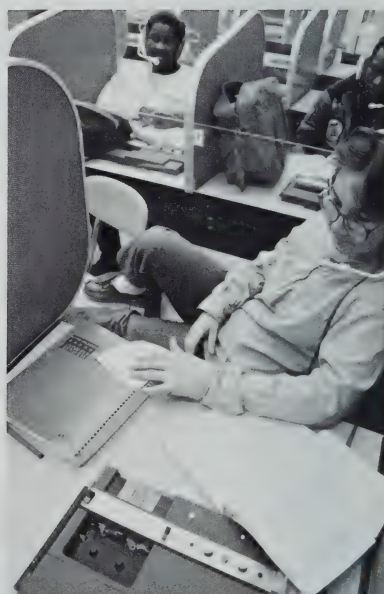

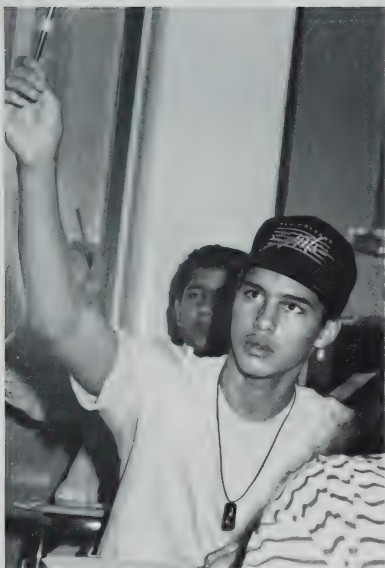

Good Luck to the Class of 91
